Attention: Editor

Gentlemen:

Recently I obtained a rather unusual tube of ancient design. Search of the literature failed to reveal significant quantitative information. Enclosed are a set of characteristic curves and a short discussion of the operating performance. While the design is mainly of academic interest today, some of the old timers may have enlightening comments. Conceivably, a practical application is still open for this unusual device. If you see fit, I will be pleased to have the enclosed published in the correspondence column of the Proceedings. The drawings were made large for ease of manipulation but should remain intelligible when reduced by a factor of eight or so.

Very truly yours,

Grote Reber
