Dear Mr. Reber:

I have not answered your letter sooner because I have very little to say. There is no doubt that the process you discuss is a possible one, but the arguments I have mentioned before have to be carefully considered. Most important of all is the accumulation of careful observations. I hope that you can continue with your excellent work.

I may say that some theoretical work has been done by some of the Harvard physicists but I do not know exactly what they have concluded. Also some observational work (intermediate in frequency between yours and Jansky's) is being planned by a graduate student in physics.

Sincerely yours,

Fred L. Whipple
