Dear Miss Parmeter:

Recently I returned here from several months in Canada. Awaiting me was a bushel of mail. Therein I found your nice letter of 26/1/88 and enclosure from Toronto Star 23/1/88.

Yes, I do remember you as an attractive young woman behind the desk. A lot has transpired since then. I still carry an account at now 50 Bloor St. West, altho I rarely visit Toronto. Since your time there have been several managers. The service continues to remain good. A few years ago I opened a checking account at 99 Bank Street in Ottawa for convenience. The banking people in Canada are much more liberal then here in Australia.

I've read the article by Terence Dickinson and found it substantially correct. Such too frequently cannot be said of newspaper articles. It gives me confidence in the Star. The last sentence is "More about this in next week's column." I wonder if you can find his discussion of 30/1/88?

Best personal wishes,
